01

Early in your career, you get paid for what you can do.

Later on, you get paid for what you know.

03 | If people can't trust you,
it doesn't matter how smart you are.

Write your emails assuming they will be read by everybody.

If you cannot write down
what you wish to say,
you do not yet know
what to say.

06

Spend time appreciating people, than waiting for them to appreciate you.

07

Nothing makes you more indispensable, than doing
what you committed to do, without anyone needing to check on you.

People are more willing to help, when they know you will still do most of the work.

Seek help with the problem early.

There's no such thing as "I can't".

Either you don't want to.
Or you need help.

"I am a perfectionist" is the worst excuse for not getting the work done.

Don't be in a hurry to create impact. Be in a hurry to learn.

12

Early on in your career, pick a job where you learn the most, irrespective of the money.

Learning compounds faster than money!

If you meet ALL expectations,
you are doing your job at your level.

For you to move to the next level, you have to start exceeding expectations.

It is much easier to be a commentator than a player.

But it's the players that everyone is watching!

What you are supposed to do, is the output.

17

What you are supposed to achieve, is the outcome.
Own the outcome.

Want to

The search is not for the best paying job, or the best brand.

18

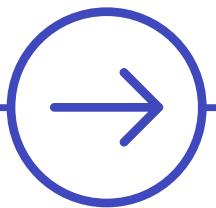

The search is for a manager who believes in you more than you believe in yourself!

Want to see

19 | Do the right thing, even when no one is looking.

A great way to set yourself up for success is to do more
after you are finished doing what you were told to do.

Become positively unpredictable.

A large part of our focus, while building a career, is on the technical aspect of it. The degree, the qualification, the years of experience, the interview, the appraisal process.

What we often miss is that the system has been designed by humans.
And humans never change!

In my experience, the most successful professionals, across fields and industries, are the ones who have understood human motivation more than systems and processes.

These tips come from their experience, their understanding.
